Dr. Marc Schweizer in the final of competition 'Entrepreneur of the Year 2011'

Schramberg/Frankfurt, September 27, 2011 - For the 15th time accountant and consulting company Ernst & Young elected Germany's best medium-sized entrepreneurs on September 23 in the Old Opera in Frankfurt. Following a multi-level and strict selection from 300 nominated companies, 65 companies made it to the final of the competition 'Entrepreneur of the Year 2011', among them Dr. Marc Schweizer, CEO of Schweizer Electronic AG. 'I am happy to belong to the finalists of this competition. This is a great personal success and also a success for all employees of Schweizer Electronic AG', Dr. Schweizer comments his reaching the final round.

'Due to its ambitious criteria and the high-ranking jury this entrepreneur prize enjoys a high reputation for many years', says Wolfgang Glauner, the competition's project leader. The 65 finalists distinguish themselves through particular innovation performance, thanks to the significant engagement of their qualified and highly motivated employees. They display efficient organizational structures with short decision making processes and thus can react flexibly on changing market conditions. From all of the finalists an independent jury composed of renowned experts in economy, selected the 'Entrepreneurs of the Year 2011. For the five categories Industry, Commerce, Services, Information and Communications Technology/Media and Start-Up one winner each had been announced and honored in front of top-class guests.

Innovation as a Key to Success

Companies being in the final round presented significant growth rates. They represented all industries, achieved average sales of 86 Million Euro per year and employed about 500 employees on average. In 2010 they hired about 2,600 new employees. Dr. Schweizer, too, was able to increase sales by 60 percent to 105 Million Euro and the number of employees rose by 12 percent. 'This confirms our company strategy. Our products and solutions fulfill the requirements of our customers and with our innovations we are leading in the area of PCBs', Dr. Marc Schweizer summarizes the reasons for growth.

An essential success factor of this year's finalists is the ability to quickly react on changing market conditions with innovative products and services: They invest more than average into innovations. They are therefore able to quickly bring latest developments to market and to counteract the growing consolidation in many industries. The entrepreneurs attribute the successful implementation of innovations to their qualified and committed staff. Thus education and training are playing a significant part in their companies.
